Q: Trying to divide a CSV into half by a fixed number Hello I am trying to count rows which are odd in my code. I want to split my data into two parts. (A: 50% B: 50%) So I can use `If(Mod(Rows.Count, 2) = 1, "Odd", "Even")` in the past. but I dont want. I also have this code. Private Sub CommandButton2_Click() Dim dt As DataTable Dim m As Integer Dim o As Integer dt = "" m = 50 If Dir(dt) "" Then dt.ReadRows "Id,Name,Age" For o = 1 To dt.Rows.Count If (o = 1) Then MsgBox "You Done" End If If (o = 2) Then MsgBox "You Done" End If If (Mod(o, 2) = 1) Then MsgBox "Odd Row" Else MsgBox "Even Row" End If Next End If End Sub Is there any faster way to do this?
A: I think the following expression should do what you need: `If (RowMod(o, 2) = 0) Then MsgBox "Even Row" Else MsgBox "Odd Row" End If` Converting the expression to VB looks like this: `If (RowMod(Row(o, 1), 2) = 0) Then MsgBox "Even Row" Else MsgBox "Odd Row" End If` Top Ten Most Feared Army Combats In a typical Major

Suppressor T-cells. CD4+ T cells that secrete a Th2 cytokine pattern can suppress the proliferation of an autologous CD4+ T cells primed by a specific antigen. Recent work in our laboratory has defined a distinct Th2-induced cell population that contains a novel phenotype characterized by high expression of CD45RA and CCR7 and low expression of IL-2 and IFN-gamma. These suppressor cells appeared to be generated within the first 12 h of antigen exposure and suggested the involvement of a novel Th2-like subset of suppressor T cells. In the art of manufacturing components or molded articles, it is a common practice to assemble the different elements that make up the components (e.g., tooling components and formed components) from at least two molded products, which are subsequently assembled. These elements include at least a first component, which is often a core, and a second component, which is often a covering, and which can be an insole, sock, shoe, etc. Because of the costs involved with manufacturing these elements, it is essential that the elements be assembled efficiently, and that they be assembled consistently to avoid waste and unnecessary costs. The art seeks to provide these advantages as well as to assemble components from different materials, such as plastic and other materials, with the goal of greater efficiency, consistency, and cost reduction. It is also desirable that the components of the components be manufactured in automated processes, whether the components are in insole, sock, shoe, or other form. It is further desirable that these components be assembled in an automated process with the particular goal of reducing time and cost. This invention relates to a process of producing a two component part, having at least two components of different materials that are to be assembled. The process of the present invention is designed to produce two components that are assembled, and also to produce components in a fully automated process. Finding Yourself It's a truth universally known, that a single person alone in a room with his thoughts can be happy but a big bus full of people is a place of misery. We are here not for ourselves, but for others. I know that it sounds ridiculous when I say these two things are so synonym with one another that they lose their meaning and make no sense. People think that they need to find themselves first before they can be any help to others. When someone is lost, they think they need to find the right path to return
