A: Yes, it is possible. The only thing you need to make this work is that your DVD drive has a 6G or more capacity. A former United States official has said that if Russian President Vladimir Putin was "stopped in mid-flow" by any state on the planet then the regime would have a "reasonable chance" of surviving at least a year. "If Putin is stopped in mid-flow, a year and a half out, or two years out, they have a chance to survive," former CIA director John Negroponte said. "They have a chance to recover," he said during an interview on a panel at the Atlantic Council, a Washington D.C.-based think tank that is being courted by the incoming Trump administration. "They are not sure what to do yet," he said. "He has to decide who to sacrifice. Putin does not have to rush it, like he did with Ukraine, because he hasn't started the process of isolating them [Yukos officials] yet." Mr. Negroponte was responding to a question from the moderator at the Atlantic Council, David Ignatius of the Washington Post. "I don't know if Putin has to follow through the full range of possible repercussions, but what he's basically saying is that if you do something this bad, you are going to pay a price," said Mr. Ignatius. "That's what he's saying," Mr. Negroponte responded. The comment by Mr. Negroponte comes a day after Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said that the West had been setting Putin up for a humiliating fall. "It's interesting to see Washington openly saying that they're fed up with Putin and have set their sites on him," he said. "If we want to create a new centre of gravity for the world, we are fed up with playing this game," he said. In late July, Mr. Lavrov stepped up the pressure on the West to declare that Russia was guilty in the poisoning of former double agent Sergei Skripal in Salisbury, England and his daughter Yulia in March. "We have been very good to you, we have been very cour 3e33713323
