The debate over expanding Medicaid to those earning up to 138% of the federal poverty level — which would mean about $31,000 a year for a family of four — has been one of the most contentious issues during the campaign. President Obama has favored it, arguing that it would allow some people to go to the doctor. Mitt Romney has not embraced the idea, arguing that it is a non-starter, particularly in a state with an $8.4 billion budget surplus. Yesterday, Massachusetts Gov. Deval Patrick, a Democrat, announced he would back the expansion. "I know it's anathema to some people, but I will vote for it," he said. Mr. Obama's proposal, which he supports, has two parts. This is the second of my Watch Dogs2 Let's Play series. I already played the game in the first Let's Play, you can watch that here: As for this Let's Player then we're going to set our sights on the many NPC's that the game has to offer. Now, let's be clear, the game has been out for only a week and in this Let's Play from Splaying Live, they don't explain almost anything. So let's not talk about that... let's talk about this NPC: Hi folks, if you're reading this it's probably because you've already discovered what Jody is up to in "Chaos Theory" Firstly, let me state as clearly as I can that I am NOT playtesting anything in this Let's Player. The game has only been available for a week and at that point in time I hadn't touched my PS4 since delivering my review to you. So, yeah... it's a very basic guide. We'll be exploring the map, gathering info about the different NPC's and finally about the very last part of the zone. We'll be shooting to the top of the building and coming back down the other side. So, I hope you've enjoyed this Let's Play of Watch Dogs 2 and if you haven't yet and you get a chance, play the game. It's brilliant. Subscribe for more

Imbueable, except how it reads as "The player that does the most damage to the opponent's face, wins the game." better or worst than "The player that does the most damage to the opponent's face wins the game?" KOLKATA: A curious discovery made at a ditch on the outskirts of city has led to the discovery of one of India's oldest and most mysterious sites, scientists said on Monday. The site, dated to Neolithic, is the earliest evidence of settlement in Kolkata and also marks the first occurrence of a similar complex, the world-over.The excavations have revealed a series of terraces, sheltering fire, food stores and stone-cutting tools. The 7.5-acre site, on the border of Kankpore and Shibpur villages and 48 km from Kolkata, was unearthed by a team of British archaeologists.Kolkata's first archaeologist, Pt Deendayal Sen, found the site in 1930s. He discovered stone axes, sherds of ceramics, human bones, crude ochre, and a few metal implements. However, except the presence of a circular excavation in the area, there was no substantial evidence of habitation.Now, after radiocarbon dating of the mud layer on the surface of the site, scientists have found layers of mud dated to 4600 BC.Dhiraj Hazra, a co-author of research paper on the findings in the journal Scientific Reports, said the land and the excavation can be dated right back to 3100 BC, a period when humans first settled to farm in South Asia. "Around 2300 BC, the Anasakti and Santali cultures flourished. Then, around 1,000 BC, the Harrapan civilisation expanded. These cultures worshipped the stars, depicted multi-headed humans and animals. But there were no temples found," Hazra said.Researchers also found evidence of a circular temple, round pit fields, fire kilns and domestic storage areas. Rad
