If the people's will prevails and the government returns to power, the outcome is not pretty. All it will take is for the neighbouring states to renew their economic and diplomatic support. African Union sanctions and isolation could then be lifted, and despite the tremendous costs and losses in blood of the last two decades, people will have only good things to say about the military coup in January 2017 that overthrew the regime of Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo. The People's Redemption Front (FRP) – composed of the rank-and-file soldiers, militia men and people's militias – seized power in the capital, Malabo, and proclaimed a new democratic constitution. The military had to go after all, as the president had bought off (with money from the Swiss banks and the international oil cartel) his top generals and thousands of police and soldiers.
