We examined the effects of MK-801 (0.25 mg/kg) on the conditioned taste aversion (CTA) paradigm in rats. In Experiment 1, the rats were trained in a CTA paradigm after the intraperitoneal (i.p.) injection of saline, saline containing 0.25 mg/kg MK-801, or saline containing 0.25 mg/kg MK-801 following the injection of LiCl (0.3 M, 30% w/v, 2 ml/kg). pretreated group compared to the control group. In Experiment 2, we examined the effect of MK-801 pretreatment on the CTA paradigm after the CS and US were presented both at the same time. Again, the CTA inducing effect of the US was significantly weaker in the MK-801 pretreated group compared to the control group. Moreover, 0.25 mg/kg MK-801 also suppressed the increase in CRF in the spleen after footshock. These findings suggest that the aversive effect of the US may modulate the CTA in the CTA paradigm and that MK-801 depresses this effect. Q: Connect multiple wifi adapters to one wifi router I want to connect multiple wifi adapters to one router (many clients connected to wifi router). I checked my ISP and they don't provide compatible modem. I need this configuration to use two wifi adapters (adapter 1 as modem and adapter 2 as client) at the same time and not one wifi adapter. If I connect router to adapter 1 then it will work but its not what I want because I need to use two different adapters (AD1 as modem and AD2 as client). What will be the problem in this configuration to connect two wifi adapters on the same router to two differnet clients? A: I would assume that you would get two SSIDs from your ISP and two wireless networks created. You would have to choose which you would like to use as your SSID on your router. A: Ok I figured it out that it can be possible by using a software which is called Hamachi and if you're using linux that is a plus: { "images": [ { "filename": "ic_mic_none_white_18pt.png", "idiom": "universal", "scale": "1x" },
