Illustrator Illustrator is a drawing program that enables you to draw, in either vector-based or raster-based technology, from scratch, or you can start with an existing object. You can then modify those objects with the various tools at your disposal. Like Photoshop, Illustrator has both a raster and vector program in the same program. Vector works on pre-drawn shapes, while raster is for drawing from scratch. Additionally, Illustrator has a full-color workspace that enables you to use colors in your artwork. All the same tools are available in Illustrator that you have in Photoshop, such as the Move and Select tools, Transform tools, grids, palettes, and painting brushes. When you create an object, you can apply color, layers, and other graphics effects to it. You can also use many of the same filters and adjustments available in Photoshop. Most people learn Illustrator by experimenting, and it can be a good exercise for you to launch a simple

LINKS LEARN! Volume 2, Number 3 (December 2004-January 2005) Print and electronic versions are available at the User Support section of BMFC's website. The glasshouse returned. We had run out of seedlings at the end of May and by the end of June the flowerbeds had filled. But the heatwave of July had wiped out everything. Trees had lost their leaves and flowers had not budded. When the buds began to swell, the budproof curtains had to be raised to stop the insects reaching the cherry and plum trees. More of the previously damaged, and already unproductive, lilac bushes in the front garden were pruned back. Chives came into flower on their own, but the only cabbages we had from last year had set seed. We topped up our seed list with cabbages from Gardeners' World and some lovely cabbage roses. The herb garden also had shoots from last year's herbs. A ladybird was seen feeding on a spider mite on a cosmos leaf and a dead bee was seen on a wild privet blossom. The autumn dahlias are looking colourful, but the dahlias in the container bed looked tired, so an expedition was needed to the village florist to replenish supplies. Garlic was also needed for Christmas - it grows year round - and mince pies were also needed for a lunchtime competition. We won - the only competitors. In the kitchen the herbs were being used, and the potatoes were drying in the cupboard. To make up for last year's failure the potato stakes were put in the ground last week. We are hoping for a bumper vegetable harvest this year and we have a plan which has been discussed at length. It has three layers: one, to get the best out of the garden; two, to get the best from the garden; three, to get the best out of the garden. We use a large number of cookbooks and one of the things that annoys us is how many of them are actually placed on the kitchen table. Of course one or two may be useful, but usually it is just a stream of misplaced books. We recently had to create a walk through the kitchen and from the 15 or so books on the shelves, 14 could be taken off the table and given a place of honour in the dining room. The thing that really annoy
